Millions of people in the UK are putting their sight at risk by continuing to smoke, warned specialists. Despite the clear connection, only one in five people recognize that smoking can lead to blindness, a poll for the Association of Optometrists (AOP) finds. Smokers are twice as likely to lose their sight compared with non-smokers, as tabaco smoke can cause and worsen a number of eye conditions.

Cigarette smoke contains toxic chemicals that can irritate and harm the eyes. Additionally, smoking can make diabetes-related sight problems worse by damaging blood vessels at the back of the eye. Smokers are also around three times more likely to get age-related macular degeneration – a condition affecting a person’s central vision, meaning that they lose their ability to see fine details. Moreover, they are 16 times more likely than non-smokers to develop sudden loss of vision caused by optic neuropathy, where the blood supply to the eye becomes blocked.

The AOP says stopping or avoiding smoking is one of the best steps you can take to protect your vision, along with having regular sight checks. Aishah Fazlanie, Optometrist and Clinical and Regulatory Adviser for the AOP, said: “People tend to know about the link between smoking and cancer, but many people are not aware of the impact that smoking can have upon the eyes.”

In the UK, 17% of men and 13% of women – around 7.4 million people – are smokers. More than half (61%) of them say they want to quit. In 2017, around 2.8 million people – 5.5% of the UK – were using e-cigarettes, and the most common reason given for this was to help quit smoking.

If you've done any traveling at all, you're likely quite aware that customs and etiquette differ from one culture to another: what may be perfectly innocuous in one place may be hideously offensive in another, and vice-versa. Granted, even if you haven't traveled at all, you're probably aware of the fact that certain types of behavior aren't exactly acceptable in other countries: belching at the table may be a sign of gratitude in some places, but in most areas of North America and Europe, such a display will earn you a fair bit of ire. Whether you plan on traveling to any of the places listed below or just doing business with a foreign client, it's important to educate yourself on the standards of politesse and etiquette beforehand—the last thing you want to do is offend someone with any ignorant, boorish behavior. Here's how to be polite in different countries.

When dealing with Japanese clients, be sure to dress fairly conservatively, and make sure that you bow lower than they do upon meeting them. Accept gifts with both hands and open them later, not in front of the giver, and never blow your nose at the dining table. Avoid asking and answering direct questions: it's better to imply rather than ask, and to answer with vagueness during conversations.

In Kenya, when greeting someone older or of a higher status than yourself, grip their right wrist with your left hand while shaking it; it's a sign of respect and deference. Do ask questions about their health, family, business etc. before getting to major topics, as skipping these niceties is seen as impolite. If sharing meals, do not begin eating until the eldest male has been served and starts to eat.

Turning down an alcoholic drink is considered terribly offensive in Russia, so it's a good idea to fortify yourself with some greasy food before heading out for a meal with Russian or Ukrainian clients. Don't smile at strangers or they'll think you're deranged, and when paying for items, place your money on the counter rather than trying to hand it directly to the cashier.

Question 44: What is the passage mainly about?

- A. Behavior to be a Courteous Person in Distinct Nations
B. Different Meanings of the same Behavior in many Countries
C. Avoiding Offensive Behavior in Different Countries
D. Different Customs you should Know when Travelling Aboard

- A. impolite B. acceptable C. wonderful D. harmless

Question 46: In which country, opening presents right away receiving them is considered not polite?

- A. Japan B. Mexico C. North America D. Kenya

Question 47: What does the word "it" in paragraph 3 refer to?

- A. their right wrist B. a higher status
C. you left hand D. a sign of respect and deference

Question 48: The word "fortify" in the last paragraph mostly means _____.

- A. weaken B. strengthen C. interest D. exhaust

Question 49: According to the last paragraph, what behavior is often seen in Russia?

- A. turning down an alcoholic drink

- B. avoiding handing money directly to the cashier
- C. asking direct questions
- D. smiling at strangers

Question 50: What can be inferred from the passage?

- A. Understanding clients' customs is an important criterion in doing business.
- B. Europeans are stricter than people in other countries.
- C. Observing and imitating behavior of the eldest is a wise choice.
- D. Dining etiquette is the most important one to know about other countries.
